Program is designed for children 6 months of age to walking. Can be adapted for older children by addition of more rhymes and action. Themes are more appropriate for the older child - can be used to build anticipation for the next class.

Partners:

Literacy for Life Foundation

Swindells Swimming Pool, Okotoks, Alberta

Bob Snodgrass Swimming Pool, High River, Alberta

In-kind contribution given by the Foothills School Division #31 – Laminated large rhyme sheets for the pool.

Goals of Project:

1. To formalize and build on the natural integration of literacy and physical skill development in the preschool aquatic program.
2. Provide an alternate method of providing “Rhythm and Rhyme” classes that is available to parents that can not or would not access the traditional classes. (Fathers, working parents, sports orientated families)
3. Provide an aquatic program that introduces a fun, safe, aquatic experience.

Goals of the Program:

The primary focus in development of this program will be the aquatic instruction with literacy as the secondary focus. Parents who enroll in this program are looking for swim instruction for their children. The tools and knowledge provided by the literacy component is still an integral part of the program but the service needs of the parents are met. Aquatic instruction at this age is designed to create an environment where a child feels comfortable and relaxed and the rhymes and songs used develop the positive learning environment. Skill development in swimming occurs more quickly and safely if the child feels safe, comfortable and relaxed in the water. The program will revolve around play and fun.

1. Teach parents basic knowledge on how rhythm and rhyme and the development of motor skills in the early years impacts on a child’s future literacy development and aquatic enjoyment. (Refer Page 4 and 5 for information on how movement and physical fitness impacts literacy development)
2. Provide activities and strategies that combine rhymes, rhythm and stories with physical development activities.
3. Create an environment that focuses on fun and play and teaches parents the importance of play based skill development.
4. To demonstrate and teach parents strategies that can be used in daily life that will assist them in calming, distracting and entertaining their children.

Strong Muscles Build Strong Readers

“Recent research demonstrates a direct link between fitness and intelligence, particularly in children under 16 and in the elderly.”¹

- 1) Physical Fitness improves stamina – This translates to more energy for writing, and sitting in school for long periods of time. Adults often forget the amount of energy needed to sit, to track and focus (board to paper) and concentrate over the day. Physical Fitness will impact on fine and gross motor skills – without stamina these skills can deteriorate over the day due to tiredness.
- 2) Physical Fitness improves alertness and the ability to pay attention and focus on task. This relates to above – Physical tiredness can impact on ability to listen. Lack of physical activity can impact the individual’s ability to sit still. The muscles need to move or the child is responding to the lack of movement/physical state rather than listening and attending to task at hand.

“The weight of the human brain is about three percent of total body weight, but it consumes 20 percent of the body’s oxygen. In order for children and adults to perform at their optimal level, they need oxygen.”

The more physically fit the person is the greater their lung capacity and ability to use the oxygen.

Research has also shown that neuro-chemical changes occur in the body when respiration rates exceed 50% of the body’s total capacity for oxygen consumption. As a result exercising above this threshold promotes change in brain chemistry which promotes the creation and retention of the neural pathways in the brain.

“American statistics show that children between the ages of 5-12 generally live a sedentary lifestyle. Research has shown they have become increasingly less active over the last 10 years. It may be no wonder that over the last ten years, the identification rate of psychosomatic disorders in children has dramatically increased.”²

- 3) Physical Fitness and exercises causes the level of endorphins released by the brain to increase. Endorphins are a chemical in the brain that is often called the brain’s messenger of the emotional system. Endorphins can control pain, cause euphoria and impact on the neuro- transmission in the brain.

“Physical movement, from earliest infancy and throughout our lives, plays an important role in the creation of nerve cell networks which are actually the essence of learning”³

¹ Rae Pica, More Movement, Smarter Kids

² Dr. Mike Wendt

³ Neurophysiologist Carla Hannaford, “Smart Moves: Why Learning is not all in Your Head”

- 4) Physical Activity and fitness will improve posture and grace. It will help to maintain the optimum weight. These elements help a child and adult gain confidence and self esteem. Emotionally they are then able to tackle new things and are not dealing with the negative social issues that come from being overweight or unable to participate
- 5) Physical Fitness helps to wards off disease/illness and it help when dealing with a physical or mental disability. Illness can result in missing school and it affects the ability to learn.
- 6) Exercise relieves stress – negative emotions interfere in learning. – In one study, increased stress lowered IQ by 14 points. Chronic stress robs one’s ability to think. The more stress the more the student tightens up and underperforms. Physical Fitness will allow the body to handle more stress and the use of physical activity can be used to put the learner in a more relaxed state.
- 7) Participating in sports not only increases their physical fitness but helps to teach them how to listen to directions. (Listening is a big part of literacy)
- 8) Physical Activity and fitness helps children and adults learn what words mean. If they have varied experience in moving their body and have the physical fitness to move it in a variety of ways they will learn and understand words through their muscles. This will help with understanding and stays with the person much longer then cognitive memory. (fast, slow, up, down, right, left)

Writing in Early Childhood Exchange, developmental and environmental psychologist Anita Rui Olds says:

Until children have experiences orienting their bodies in space by going up, on, under, beside, inside, and in front of things, it is possible they will have difficulty dealing with letter identification and the orientation of symbols on a page. The only difference between a small “b” and a small “d,” for example, both of which are composed of a line and a circle, depends upon orientation, i.e., which side of the circle is the line on?

Lesson Plans – Each lesson has a column that outlines the literacy goals of the rhymes and activities. Information on this page is provided to give the instructors a general explanation that supports the specific ones in the lessons.

Due to the fact that all of the rhymes and songs provide practice in hearing and learning to play and manipulate sounds this goal is not entered in each column. Remember however they are two key elements in literacy development. Also the benefits of the physical movements in literacy development are not listed in each column but assumed.

A child must hear the sounds, play with them and learn to manipulate them. A child must hear these sounds often and presented in different ways. Rhyming is a key element in literacy development. Repetition, recognition of patterns and sequencing are all part of the benefits of rhymes and song. Many of the activities in the lessons involve having the children face their parents as they do the actions. This is important for two reasons:

1. The child sees how the words are physically formed and they also see the emotion that shows on their parent's face which helps them relate to the emotion in the words.
2. Face to face interaction gives the child an anchor (parent) Helps with focus and builds connections.

Gross and fine motor skill development and physical fitness are also important elements of literacy acquisition so each aquatic activity provides opportunity for the child to build capabilities in this area. (Refer page 4, 5 and articles by Rae Pica)

A child must learn vocabulary in the oral language first. Under the literacy column vocabulary will be indicated with reference to the type of vocabulary Example – parts of body, verbs etc.

A good reader is able to make pictures in their head when they read and they also need to understand what the words mean. They need to have experience with many things so that they can attach meaning to things, actions and emotions of a story. Many of the rhymes focus on prepositions – (in, out, between, under, over, up, down). This is a hard concept for children to understand. The experience they receive in the water as the parent moves them according to the actions will help them understand the meaning of the words.

It is also important to involve as many senses in the learning as possible. The child will experience language through their ears (auditory), visually (seeing what others are doing), and doing the actions and using props.

Research has shown that gestures help in language acquisition and helps the child understand what the words are all about. The more the body is involved in learning the greater the language development. Even before they use words, they use cries and gestures to convey meaning; they often understand the meanings that others convey. The point of learning language and interacting socially is not to master rules, but to make connections with other people and to make sense of experiences (Wells, 1986).

Lesson Plans – Each lesson has a column that outlines the aquatic goals of the rhymes and activities.

Repetition of Rhymes:
Repeat each rhyme three times.

*Key Instructional Note:

It is important that the instructor knows and is comfortable with the rhymes. The instructor needs to lead the parents and focus on the actions and activities related to rhymes to ensure varied movement. If the parents and children are not moving they will lose interest and will be cold. Instructors can have a plastic zip lock bag with the rhymes on a flutter board in pool. Instructor can refer to them if they need to be reminded of the words for the rhymes.

Each parent will have a zip lock bag large enough to accept the handouts. The child's name will be written on it with permanent marker. The parents will take their handouts home and then bring the bag back each lesson. Spare bags need to be available in case parents forget bag at home.

All rhymes should be photocopied and made into a book for the parents. They will receive the book on the first lesson.

Some of the handouts need to be ordered and a list is provided in the bibliography outlining where they can be accessed. If they are not listed in the bibliography the remaining handouts can be photocopied for use with the program.

Many of the props used in the lessons can be purchased at dollar stores at a minimal cost. The book used in lesson 4 is also listed in the bibliography.

A library of Bathtub Books can be developed and kept at pool.

The dressing room rhymes should be laminated and placed in the dressing rooms for the use of all parents.

The lessons are set up so that the literacy hand outs are talked about in the hot tub. An alternate method if time allows in scheduling is to have the parents come 15 minutes earlier and discuss the information and go over rhymes before they have a shower and enter the pool. The rhymes can be printed out on large paper, put on to poster board and laminated. Rings can be used to hang the rhymes on a flip chart. Color code the rhymes according to lesson and print out the repeat rhymes for each lesson. These should not be used in the actual swim lesson as the parents will focus on the sheets rather than the oral language and their children.

Tips for the Hot Tub:

Some parents do not want to take their children to the hot tub at the end of class. Stress to the parent it is important they come down for the discussion at the end. Recommend they bring towels or warm cover up for themselves and child. Toys should be available on the side for the children who are not in tub.

Pool Rhyme Time Dressing Room Rhymes

After a Bath

(Suit actions to words)

After my bath, I try, try, try,
To wipe myself 'till I'm dry, dry, dry.
Hands to wipe, and fingers and toes,
And two wet legs and a shiny nose.
Just think, how much less time I'd take
If I were a dog, and could shake, shake, shake.

Dressing time

(Sung to "The Farmer in the Dell")

We're putting on our shirt,
We're putting on our shirt.
It's dressing time; you look so fine,
We're putting on our shirt.

We're putting on our pants,
We're putting on our pants.
It's dressing time; you look so fine,
We're putting on our pants.

And now it's time for socks,
And now it's time for socks.
It's dressing time; you look so fine,
And now it's time for socks.

Let's finish with our shoes,
Let's finish with our shoes.
It's dressing time; you look so fine,
Let's finish with our shoes.

So, now the dressing's done,
So, now the dressing's done.
Our dressing's done,
Let's have some fun,
Look out world, here we come!

That's my Baby

(Sung to London Bridge)

This is how your shirt goes on
Shirt goes on, shirt goes on.
This is how your shirt goes on,
That's my baby!

Repeat for pants, socks etc.

As you dress your baby, be sure to talk about what you are doing. Use sing song phrases such as "Here's your shirt!" Capture baby's attention and he/she will be less likely to fuss. Say what it is and what it is used for. "A hat keeps your head warm."

Traffic Light Song

(Sing to the People on the Bus)

What do you do when the light turns red?
The light turns red, the light turns red?
What do you do when the light turns red?
Red means you stop.

What do you do when the light turns yellow?
The light turns yellow, the light turns yellow?
What do you do when the light turns yellow?
Yellow means you look.

What do you do when the light turns green?
The light turns green, the light turns green?
What do you do when the light turns green?
Green means you go slow.

Good Morning Song

Good morning _____
(Insert child's name)
How are you?
How are you?
How are you?
Good morning _____
How are you?
How are you today?
(Change to evening or afternoon depending on time of classes)

Good Bye Song

Goodbye children
Goodbye children
Goodbye children
We're bound to leave you now.

Merrily we roll along, roll along,
roll along
Merrily we roll along
O'er the deep blue sea
Sweet dreams children
Sweet dreams children
Sweet dreams children
We're bound to leave you now.

The Little Old Man (poem)

A little old man went up in space
(Lift child high)
And he got ice cream all over his face
(Touch his face and look surprised)
So – wash him with a washcloth
Roll him in a rug
And tuck him in a towel
Until he's snug, snug, snug

Rain Is Falling Down

Rain is falling down,
(Raise hands high and flutter fingers down)
Splash!

(Slap the water with gusto.)

Rain is falling down,
(Hands up high and flutter fingers down again)

Splash!
(Slap the water)

Pitter patter, pitter patter,
(Quietly. Flutter fingers delicately)

Rain is falling down,
(Flutter fingers down)
Splash! (Slap the water with gusto)

This is the way the children ride,
Hobbie-dy, hobble-dy hoy.

Can You Jump Like a Frog?

Suit actions to words.

Can you hop, hop, hop like a bunny?
Can you jump, jump, jump like a frog?
Can you walk, walk, walk like a duck?
Can you run, run, run like a dog?
Can you fly, fly, fly like a bird?
Can you swim, swim, swim like a fish?
But can you still be a quiet little child?
And sit as still as this?

Old Mc Donald had a Pool

Old Mc Donald had a pool

One little, two little, three little monkeys,
Four little, five little, six little monkeys,
(Hold up the right number of fingers).
Seven little, eight little, nine little monkeys,
Ten little monkey friends.
"And do you know what they did?
They got in their boats very carefully.
Be careful you don't tip over."
(Carefully climb into imaginary boats.)
They rowed, and they rowed, and they rowed to the shore. (Rowing motion.)
They rowed, and they rowed, and they
rowed to the shore.
They rowed, and they rowed, and they
rowed to the shore.
Ten little monkey friends.
"It was so hot, and they were tired of sitting,
So they all stood up very carefully."
(Wipe brow. Balancing motion.)
They all stood up, and the boat tipped over.
(Fall in water.)
They all stood up, and the boat tipped over.
They all stood up, and the boat tipped over.
Ten little monkey friends.
"What are we going to do now?"
They swam, and they swam, and they swam
to the shore. (Swimming motion.)
They swam, and they swam, and they swam
to the shore.
They swam, and they swam, and they swam
to the shore.
Ten little monkey friends.
"Now, what shall we do?"
They were cold and wet, and they ran home
to mother. (Running motion.)
They were cold and wet, and they ran home
to mother.
They were cold and wet, and they ran home
to mother.
Ten little monkey friends.

"And what do you suppose she did?"
She fed them and kissed them, and put them to bed.
(Eating motion, kissing motion and sleeping

At the Zoo

I like the zoo, its lots of fun!
See a cougar on the run
(Run in place)
Hear a lion growl and roar
(Loud roar)
Watch a snake slither on the floor
(Lie down and slither)
Laugh as chimps swing in the air
(Wave arms)
Back and forth without a care
Elephants are big and strong
(Stamp feet)
Long trunks swinging right along
(Wave arm as trunk)
I like the zoo, its lots of fun
Now wave goodbye, the day is done!

Sit down gently.

She Fell into the Bathtub

She fell into the bathtub
She fell into the sink
Lean child to one side, then the other
She fell into the raspberry jam
Let her fall between your knees
And came out pink!
Lift her up again
We put her in the backyard
And left her in the rain
Make the rain with your fingers
By half past supertime
Rock side to side
It washed her clean again!
Wide open arms and a hug.

It is Raining (sung to “Frere Jacques”)

It is raining, it is raining
On my head, on my head
Pitter, patter raindrops
Pitter, patter raindrops
I’m all wet, I’m all wet

Two Little Eyes

Two little eyes to look around
Two little ears to hear each sound
One little nose to smell what is sweet
And one little mouth that like to eat.

Stand up Tall

Stand up tall, hands in the air;
All stand and raise hands in the air.
Now sit down, in your chair. (Sit)
Clap your hands; (3 times)
Make a frown. (Frown)
Smile and smile, (smile)
And flop like a clown!
Relax with arms dangling.

We Can Jump

We can jump, jump, jump!
We can hop, hop, hop!
We can clap, clap, clap!
We can stop, stop, stop!
We can nod our heads for "Yes",
We can shake our heads for "No".
We can bend our knees a little bit,
And sit.....down.....slow.

I Can Hop, Hop, Hop like a Bunny

I can hop, hop, hop like a bunny,
And run, run, run like a dog;
I can walk, walk, walk like an elephant,
And jump, jump, jump like a frog.
I can swim, swim, swim like a fish,
And fly, fly, fly like a bird;
I can sit right down and cross my arms,
And not say a single word!
(Do motions in poem)

I Don't Care!

(To the tune of Jimmy Crack Corn)

Shake your arm and I don't care
Shake your arm and I don't care
Shake your arm and I don't care
Shake your arm all day!
Shake your leg and I don't care
Shake your leg and I don't care
Shake your leg and I don't care
Shake your leg all day!
Jump up and down
and I don't care
Jump up and down
and I don't care
Jump up and down
and I don't care
Jump up and down all day!

I'm a Fish

Sung to: "I'm a Little Teapot"
I'm a little fishy, I can swim.
Here is my tail, here is my fin.
When I want to have fun with my friend,
I wiggle my tail and dive right in.

Toes are Tapping

Sung to: "Skip to My Lou"
Hands are clapping, clap, clap, clap
Hands are clapping, clap, clap, clap
Hands are clapping, clap, clap, clap
Clap your hands, my darling.
Toes are tapping, tap, tap, tap
Toes are tapping, tap, tap, tap
Tap your toes, my darling.
(Also use: Arms are swinging, Fingers are wiggling, Eyes are blinking, Tongues are clicking, etc)

My Bubble flew Over the Ocean.

Sung to: "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean"
My bubble lies over the ocean.
My bubble flew over the sea.
My bubble flew over the rainbow.
Oh come back my bubble to me.
Come back, come back,
Oh come back, my bubble to me!

Traffic Light Song – for safety

Do you know what traffic lights say to you?
Do you know what traffic lights say to do?
Yellow says be careful,
Green says you may go,
But red is most important is says stop you know.

Twinkle Twinkle Traffic Light (sung to Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star)

Twinkle, twinkle traffic light
Twinkle, twinkle traffic light,
Standing on the corner bright,
When it green its time to go,
when it's red its stop you know,
Twinkle, twinkle traffic light,
Standing on the corner bright.

This little piggy had a rub-a-dub-dub,
This little piggy had a scrub-a-scrub-scrub,
This little piggy ran up the stairs,
This little piggy cried "bears, bears, bears",
Down came a jar with a great big slam,
And this little piggy ate all the jam

Rock the Boat (sung to Frere Jacques)

Rock, rock, rock the boat,
Gently to and fro,
Watch out, give a shout,
Into the water you go!!!

Linking Literacy to Movement

By Rae Pica

As a movement specialist for nearly a quarter of a century, I've seen response to my topic wax and wane over the years. At first, no one wanted to hear the words children and movement together, imagining as they did the chaos that could result.

Gradually, however, early childhood professionals realized children were going to move anyway; and they could either fight it or use it. (It was the educational version of "If you can't beat 'em, join 'em.")

Today I find that most early childhood professionals are fully aware of the cognitive benefits of movement. They understand that young children need to physically experience concepts in order to truly grasp them. Recent brain research, as well as Howard Gardner's recognition of the bodily/kinesthetic intelligence as a way of learning and knowing, has confirmed this. But with the clamor for more accountability and testing – and the emphasis placed almost exclusively on early literacy – movement is once again in danger of falling by the wayside. Not only are physical education and even recess being eliminated from schools and centers in favor of more "academic time;" teachers are also feeling pressured to teach young children in ways that are developmentally inappropriate.

But children haven't changed. They still need to physically experience concepts to fully understand them, and that includes concepts falling under the heading of literacy and the language arts. This article, therefore, looks at why and how early childhood professionals should use movement as a tool in the promotion of children's emerging literacy.

Language Arts – Then and Now

The language arts include the components of listening, speaking, reading, and writing. Therefore, being about communication – imparted or received – his content area plays a vital role in every individual's life. It is also part of every curriculum, in one form or another, from preschool through advanced education. Additionally, it is tied to linguistic intelligence, which is granted enormous validation in our society (Pica, 1999).

In early childhood programs, language arts have traditionally received the greatest concentration during daily group or circle times. During these periods, teachers and caregivers read stories or poems to the children, who sit and listen. Sometimes discussion precedes or follows the readings. In elementary schools, reading and writing have all too commonly been handled as separate studies, with the children focusing on topics like phonics, spelling, and grammar.

Today's approaches to children's emerging literacy recognize that listening, speaking, reading, and writing overlap and interrelate, each contributing to the growth of the others. These approaches also acknowledge that children learn best those concepts that are relevant to them. Therefore, their language acquisition and development must be a natural process that occurs over time, relates to all aspects of the children's lives, and actively involves the children in making meaning (Sawyer & Sawyer, 1993; Raines & Canady, 1990).

More Movement, Smarter Kids By Rae Pica

Most people can understand how physical activity can impact not only their child's physical development but also his social/emotional development. But intellectual development? What could movement possibly have to do with learning? After all, schools – where most of the child's learning is supposed to take place – are our prime promoters of inactivity. ("Sit still." "Stop squirming." "Don't run." "Stay in your seat.") If movement were critical to learning, wouldn't the schools be employing it?

Certainly, you'd think so. Those of us who've understood the connection between moving and learning for a very long time have been waiting just as long for the educational "revolution." And yet, not only is movement in the classroom a rarity, but also physical education and recess are being eliminated as though they were completely irrelevant to children's growth and development. Perhaps the revolution will only finally arrive when you, as a parent, become aware of movement's role in cognitive development and learning and begin to insist the schools do what's right for children and not merely what the policy makers think they should be doing. As Einstein so succinctly pointed out, "Learning is experience. Everything else is just information." Piaget, the noted child development specialist studied by future teachers, labeled this learning sensor motor and determined it was the child's earliest form of learning. Since then, brain research has proven them both right.

But the most recent brain research has done much more than that. It's now understood that, because a child's earliest learning is based on motor development, so too is much of the knowledge that follows. The cerebellum, the part of the brain previously associated with motor control only, is now known to be, as Eric Jensen, author of numerous books on brain-based learning, puts it, a "virtual switchboard of cognitive activity." Study after study has demonstrated a connection between the cerebellum and such cognitive functions as memory, spatial orientation, attention, language, and decision making, among others.

Thanks to advances in brain research, we now know that most of the brain is activated during physical activity – much more so than when doing seatwork. In fact, according to Jensen, sitting for more than 10 minutes at a stretch "reduces our awareness of physical and emotional sensations and increases fatigue." He tells us this results in reduced concentration and, most likely, discipline problems.

Movement, on the other hand, increases blood vessels that allow for the delivery of oxygen, water, and glucose ("brain food") to the brain. And this can't help but optimize the brain's performance!

All of this, of course, contradicts the longstanding and much-loved belief that children learn best when they're sitting still and listening and working quietly at their desks. It also helps us understand why

- ☉ One Canadian study showed academic scores went up when a third of the school day was devoted to physical education.
- ☉ A Canadian study demonstrated children participating in five hours of vigorous physical activity a week had stronger academic performance in math, English, natural sciences, and French than did children with only two hours of physical activity per week.
- ☉ A study of third-grade children participating in dance activities improved their reading skills by 13 percent over six months, while their peers, who were sedentary, showed a decrease of two percent.

Supplemental Articles Hand out Day 6

- ☉ In France, children who spent eight hours a week in physical education demonstrated better academic performance, greater independence, and more maturity than students with only 40 minutes of PE a week.
- ☉ Children who participate in daily physical education have been shown to perform better academically and to have a better attitude toward school.
- ☉ A study conducted by neurophysiologist Carla Hannaford determined that children who spent an extra hour a day exercising did better on exams than students who didn't exercise.
- ☉ Recent research demonstrates a direct link between fitness and intelligence, particularly in children under 16 and in the elderly.

It is a huge mistake to think the mind and body are separate entities. The truth is that the domains of child development – physical, social, emotional, and cognitive – simply do not mature separately from one another. There's an overlap and interrelatedness among them. And children do not differentiate among thinking, feeling, and moving. Thus, when a child learns something related to one domain, it impacts the others.

Research shows that movement is the young child's preferred mode of learning – because they best understand concepts when they're physically experienced. For example, children need to get high and low, small and large, wide and narrow shapes to truly understand these quantitative concepts. They need to act out simple computation problems (demonstrating the nursery rhyme “Three Little Monkeys” to discover three minus one equals two) to comprehend subtraction. They have to take on the straight and curving lines of the letters of the alphabet to fully grasp the way in which the letters should be printed.

Writing in Early Childhood Exchange, developmental and environmental psychologist Anita Rui Olds says:

Until children have experiences orienting their bodies in space by going up, on, under, beside, inside, and in front of things, it is possible they will have difficulty dealing with letter identification and the orientation of symbols on a page. The only difference between a small “b” and a small “d,” for example, both of which are composed of a line and a circle, depends upon orientation, i.e., which side of the circle is the line on?

Eric Jensen labels this kind of hands-on learning implicit – like learning to ride a bike. At the opposite end of the spectrum is explicit learning – like being told the capital of Peru. He asks, if you hadn't ridden a bike in five years, would you still be able to do it? And if you hadn't heard the capital of Peru for five years, would you still remember what it was? Extrinsic learning may be quicker than learning through exploration and discovery, but the latter has greater meaning for children and stays with them longer. There are plenty of reasons for this, but one of them just may be that intrinsic learning creates more neural networks in the brain. And it's more fun!

Carla Hannaford, in Smart Moves: Why Learning Is Not All in Your Head, states, “We have spent years and resources struggling to teach people to learn, and yet the standardized achievement test scores go down and illiteracy rises. Could it be that one of the key elements we've been missing is simply movement?”

Parents and children share the words and pictures, the ideas, the rhythm and rhymes, the pain and the comfort and the hopes and fears they find together in the pages of books and connect through their minds and hearts. The fire of literacy is created through the emotional sparks between a child, a book and the person reading. It is not the book alone or the child alone or the reader alone but the relationship that happens that brings all three together.

Read out loud to your child until they won't let you read to them anymore. Don't stop just because you think they can read on their own.

A Child should hear 1000 stories before they go to school. Use the chart and see how easy it is! It doesn't have to be a new one each time. They may want you to read the same one over and over and over again. That is okay. They are still learning something from that story.

How can you help your child get ready to read? Talk, read, draw and laugh!

Recent reading research proves there are simple things you can do to prepare your child for reading success. Children need a foundation for reading. You can build that foundation. Your child needs to:

- Learn the alphabet
- Understand that letters and words mean something
- Build a listening and speaking vocabulary
- Have many different experiences to relate to new words and ideas
- Connect drawing and writing to reading

Here are several easy and fun activities you can do to help your child get ready to read.

Talk and Listen to Your Child

- ↪ Talk with your children. There is no substitute for time spent talking with your child. You are teaching new words and ideas. Talk in complete sentences and encourage them to do the same.
- ↪ Encourage your child to describe experiences and ideas. Use photo albums or magazine pictures to start a conversation.

- ↪ Take your child to visit interesting places - playgrounds, grocery stores, libraries, museums and historical sites. Discuss these places or read more about them

Fall in Love with Language

- ↪ Stick labels on objects in your home such as the table or toothbrush. Collect the labels and have your child put them back on the correct items.
- ↪ Teach your child nursery rhymes and songs. Recite and sing them together often.
- ↪ Play with words - separate the sounds in a word (i.e. "mud" has three different sounds). Note how some words begin with the same sound (i.e. "dog" and "dark") or rhyme (i.e. "tea" and "me").
- ↪ Make up silly sounds and funny chants. Dr. Seuss books are great for playing with language and sparking the imagination.
- ↪ Look for letters of the alphabet everywhere you go.

Raising a Successful Reader: Part 1, Getting Ready to Read Develop Vocabulary and Concepts

- ↪ Point to pictures in books and magazines and ask your child to describe the picture.
- ↪ Play the game, "I see something," where one person describes an object in view and the other(s) must guess what it is.
- ↪ Help your youngster make connections among words or concepts such as "winter = cold, snow, holidays;" or "dinner = food, family, evening." "bath = clean, relax, warm, fun"

Show How Print has Meaning

- ↪ Find answers to your child's many questions by looking them up in books, newspapers or magazines. Explain that the printed words on the page can provide information.
- ↪ Show your child how print helps us everyday: for example, providing directions for putting a bike together, recipes for fixing dinner or directions to a friend's house
- ↪ Point to and read the words on items like grocery lists, restaurant menus or signs in the street. Help your child notice the difference between words like "chocolate" or "vanilla" ice cream.

Connect Drawing, Reading and Writing

- ↪ Encourage your child to draw pictures. Drawing is a preparation for writing and reading. Display your child's pictures proudly.
- ↪ Show your child how to write his/her name. Practice. Practice.
- ↪ Collaborate with your child to compose a note to a relative or a friend. Have your child dictate as you write. Read the note back, pointing to the words as you read them.

Laugh

- ↪ Remember to have fun with your child. From making up silly sounds to talking about a story, appreciate your child's special joy for learning new things. So laugh, even when your child asks you to read that one favorite book — again and again and again!

Child Development – things to know!

Children learn and grow at different rates and this is called child development. Children reach “milestones” at certain ages. The main types are:

Physical – as they grow taller and heavier, and learn to do things like crawl and walk.

Cognitive – how they think, learn to reason, judge. Language falls in this area.

Social and Emotional - how they get along with others and connect.

Remember children develop at different rates. Don't worry if your child reaches a milestone a couple months later than your friend's child. Walking is a good example. On the average, children take their first step when they are about 11 months, but many children don't walk until they are 17 months. Some walk as early as nine months. As a general rule don't worry until your child is about 6 months past the average.

Knowing some information about child development will help you as a parent know what can be reasonably expected from your child at different ages. It can help you teach, discipline and nurture. It gives you some idea of what you can ask them to do within their developmental level. It also helps you be more patient.

Rhymers will be Readers!!! Research in literacy and child development has found that if children know eight nursery rhymes by heart by the time they are four years old they are usually among the best readers by the time they are eight.

Songs and Rhymes provide comforting rhythms in children's early lives and expose them to many forms of language.

From songs children learn: Words, sentences, rhythm, rhyme and repetition.

Parents can also use them to help them calm, distract, teach and amuse their children in everyday life.

Ten Good Things to Do For Your Baby or Young Child

1) Touch and Carry Your Baby

You get to know each other through smell and touch.

2) Talk and Sing to Baby

It's good for babies to hear the sounds of language. Repetition, rhymes and song calm young children and help them to learn the pattern of language.

3) Listen to What Baby is Telling You

Babies and young children need to know that you will respond to them and meet their needs.

4) Laugh Together

Being able to laugh is part of a balanced, happy life.

5) Encourage Play

Let your child experiment with Jell-o. In the first year of life, parents can provide everything a child needs without toys. Play with your child.

6) Make Friends With Books

Books fascinate young children. Show your child the pictures and talk to them about what you see. Give your baby the books that he can pull and chew.

7) Go Outside

Fresh air is good for you and your child. It will enhance your health and your mental health.

8) Share Your Daily Life and Take Your Child on Outings

Children can learn a lot by watching and being a part of family activities. Go to the park or to the grocery store.

9) Make Friends Together

It's good for children, even infants, to get out and begin to interact with other children. It's also good for moms to get time to share with other mothers.

10) Don't Overdo It

Babies and young children can be over stimulated. Children have their own rhythms and need downtime, too. Make sure that you and baby both get lots of rest.

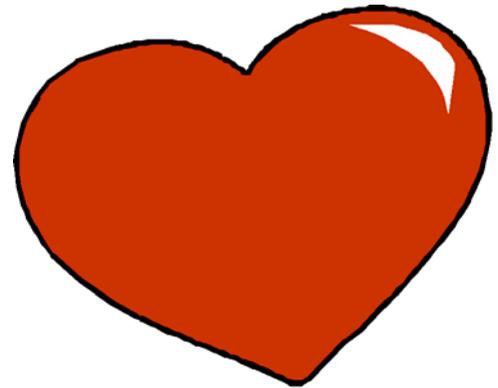

CATCH YOUR KIDS BEING GOOD!

Notice when children are doing well, and let them know that you are pleased with their behavior. Always separate the child from the action. Let the child know that you still love them, even when you are unhappy with their behavior.

SIX CRITICAL LIFE MESSAGES

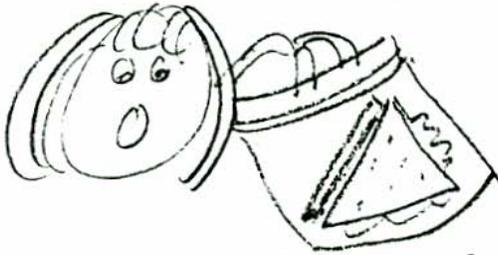

- I believe in you
- I trust you
- I know that you can handle it (the challenges of life)
- You are listened to
- You are cared for
- You are important to me

Barbara Coloroso

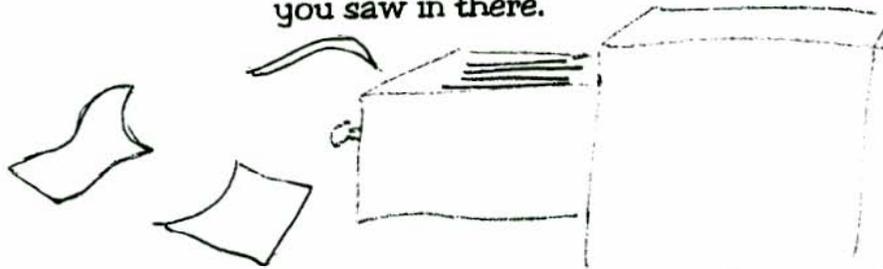

10 Easy Steps to Make a BATHTUB BOOK (That can REALLY go in the water!)

1. Dig through the kitchen drawer to find at least 3 ziplock sandwich bags or freezer bags. (without holes!)

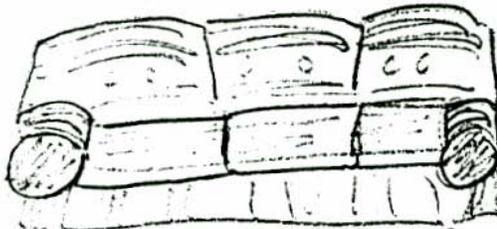

- Take the sandwiches out!!

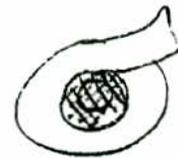

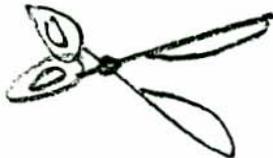

2. Dig through your top dresser drawer for that scrap paper you are sure you saw in there.

3. Look in the bottom of the toy box, or down the back of the couch to find an assortment of crayons or markers. (WHAT!? You actually keep those things in a box???)

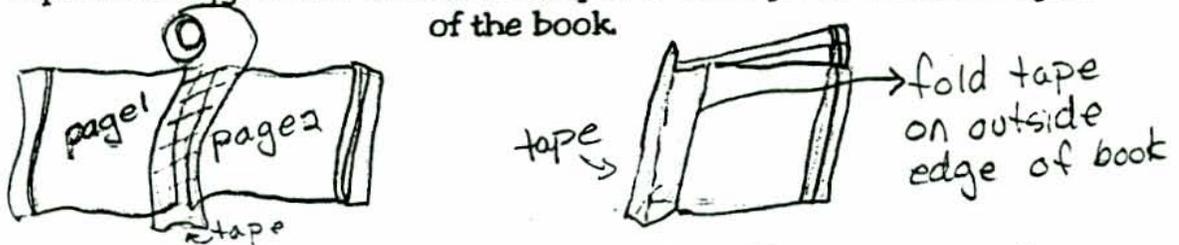

4. While you are in all those places, keep an eye out for scissors, old magazines, glue and a roll of clear packing tape. (That really wide stuff)

5. Whew! Now that you've got all that done, gather the family for a FUN time.

Bathtub books page 2

6. Tape the 3 bags together like a book, on the sides that DON'T have the ziplock thingy. Close the book and put the last piece down the spine of the book.

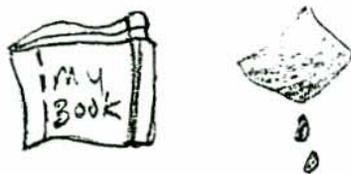

7. Cut the scrap paper to fit inside each bag. Now get creative!

8. You can use the magazine pictures or draw your own. You can make any kind of book you like. Maybe a rhyme book, or a song you like to sing in the shower. Maybe a book about underwater creatures. Go WILD! (and you kids can make one too!)

9. Now put the pages back inside the book. (You did draw on both sides right?) and close the ziplock sides. If ever a page gets wet, just take it out and put in a new one!

10. Now climb into a nice bubble bath and relax with a good bathtub book. (And you kids can sing along with your favorite bathtub book, or swim with the sea creatures, or float with your book, or try reading underwater...the possibilities are endless!)
