■ Acknowledgements

We would like to acknowledge and thank the following organizations for their support in this project.

- The National Literacy Secretariat of Human Resources and Social Development Canada funded research and production of the Family Literacy Directory and Family Literacy Map.
- Literacy BC and ABC CANADA Literacy Foundation helped us frame the concept of family literacy and gave us permission to include excerpted definitions.
- Community agencies—Project Literacy Victoria, the South Island Learning Community and the Greater Victoria Public Library, Central Branch—provided in-kind support.
- LifeCycles facilitated community mapping and planning and Mapswest built the Family Literacy Map.
- Busy coordinators and administrative staff from local agencies and program groups responded to emails and telephone enquiries. Participants at the June 2006 Literacy Mapping Morning expanded our growing knowledge of community resources and programs.

Family literacy refers to the many ways families develop and use literacy skills, from enjoying a storybook together at bedtime and during the day, to playing with word games, singing, writing to a relative or friend, sharing day-to-day tasks such as making a shopping list or using a recipe, and surfing the Internet for fun and interesting sites.

■ Introduction

Family Literacy

Community organizations explain family literacy in different words. We found that all definitions include parents and children working together and highlight reading aloud.

Literacy BC most clearly captures this thinking.¹

Family literacy is an innovative educational approach based on a powerful premise: parents are their children's first and most important teachers.

Family literacy is a shared responsibility that builds on existing community resources and combines the strengths of many partners and builds knowledge within the community.

Family literacy is culturally responsive and as diverse as the communities in which it is developed.

Simple things like reading and telling stories to a child at 18 months are powerful stimuli for brain development in the early years.

– Early Years Study Final Report: Reversing the Real Brain Drain,
Government of Ontario, 1999

Using the Directory

Family literacy work occurs in many places across Greater Victoria.

This directory includes programs and resources that combine opportunities for parents/guardians and children to learn together as well as opportunities for adults to support their child's early literacy development.

Organizations offering direct programs and services are included in the Programs section and listed in alphabetical order. In the Additional Resources section we have included groups that provide program funding support or deliver a variety of literacy programs for children, youth and adults.

Information about organizations and programs was collected over several months in 2005 and 2006. As you explore the options available, please make sure you contact each organization to obtain the most current program details and information.

The Directory of Family Literacy Programs Greater Victoria and the companion Family Literacy Map are available on-line at Victoria READ Society www.readsociety.bc.ca.

Having a parent or other caring person read aloud with their children helps children learn listening skill, vocabulary and language skills, as well as develop imagination and creativity.

– Family Literacy Foundation, 2001

About us—Victoria READ Society (READ)

For 30 years the Victoria READ Society has helped learners of all ages overcome literacy challenges.

Teachers trained in literacy, special education and English-as-a Second Language assess learners and develop programs that meet individual needs and goals.

Children and youth programs include one-to-one instruction in math, reading and language. Small-group adult programs cover basic academic skills, upgrading for employment and English language and literacy for landed immigrants and refugees.

In a caring environment READ participants expand their ability in language and numbers, build self-esteem and become more confident members of their communities.

A red square is positioned to the left of a vertical red line. The line extends from the top of the square to the top of the text area.

Professional teachers trained in literacy, special education and English-as-a-second language assess learners and develop programs that meet individual needs and goals.

Individualized programs for children, youth, and adults include one-to-one instruction in reading, writing, and mathematics.

Small-group adult programs cover basic academic skills and upgrading for employment.

Small classes provide English language and literacy instruction for adult landed immigrants and refugees.
